GUIDANCE FOR PHOTOGRAPHING AND FILMING

It's important that children and participant feel happy with their achievements and have photographs and films of their special moments. Family and friends also want to be able to share the successes of their children when they have been part of a special event or activity.

However, some children, parents or carers may not be comfortable with images of themselves, or their children being shared. For example:

- If a child and/or their family have experienced abuse, they may worry about the perpetrator tracing them online.
- Children who choose not to have contact with some members of their family may decide to minimise their online presence.
- families may have religious or cultural reasons for choosing not to be photographed.

It's important to be aware of child protection and safeguarding issues when taking photos of or filming children and participants. The potential for misuse of images can be reduced if organisations are aware of the potential dangers and put appropriate measures in place. You should also consider the data protection implications of making, using and storing images of children and participant for your organisation's use. We've put together guidance to help you think about and mitigate the risks involved with making and sharing images of children.

Risks of sharing images online

Sharing photographs and images of children on social media or other online platforms carries potential risks. For example:

- children may become vulnerable to grooming if a photograph is shared alongside information that makes them identifiable. This includes personal details; a tag with location information; visual details such as a school uniform.
- inappropriate images of children may be shared online.
- images may be copied, downloaded, screenshotted or shared by anyone.
- images of children may be adapted and used inappropriately.
- photos or videos may appear in internet search results.
- depending on the terms and conditions of using an online platform, the image may be owned by the platform once it's been posted. Platforms may then license images for use by third parties – such as for commercial purposes.
- each photo or video, and any comments on them, become a part of a child's public image. This may affect them later in life – for example, it may affect how they see themselves, or how they are viewed when applying for a job (Thinkuknow, 2021).

Before sharing images of children on social media, adults should consider how widely images may be shared, how long they may remain available and how this may affect the children's long-term wellbeing.

Occasionally we may take photographs and videos of participants, on the Foundation's programmes and events, to promote our services, share achievements and celebrate successes, helping the Foundation to reach its ambition.

This might include (but is not limited to), the right to use them in printed and online publicity, social media, press releases and funding applications.

From time to time, our setting may also be visited by the media who will take photographs or film footage of a high-profile events. Participants will often appear in these images, which may appear in local or national newspapers, or on televised news programmes.

To comply with the Data Protection Act 1998 we need your permission before we can photograph or make any recordings of the learner.
